

Lucky Animals

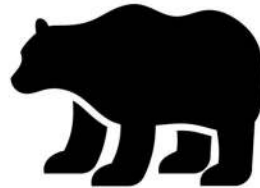

In Japan, frogs are a symbol of good luck. They also represent transformation, as they change from tadpoles into frogs.

The butterfly is a symbol of transformation, reincarnation, immortality, and the soul. A butterfly is a sign of good luck in love.

The cat is a symbol of independence. Cats have been considered signs of both good and bad luck. In ancient Egypt, cats symbolized Bast, the protector goddess.

The bear is considered lucky because it is able to survive the long winter hibernating. In Norse mythology, Odin and Thor often take on the appearance of bear as disguise.

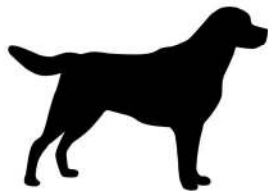

Bees are considered messengers of good luck. If a bee enters your home, it's a sign that good luck is coming your way.

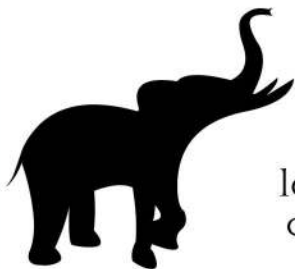

It's a sign of good luck coming your way for crickets to come into your home. Killing a cricket is said to bring bad luck.

The dog symbolizes loyalty, friendship, and unconditional love. It's a sign that good luck is coming your way if you're followed by a stray dog.

Donkeys are considered a symbol of patience and humility. They are said to prevent accidents and premature births.

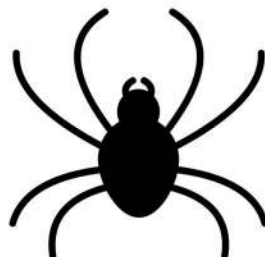

Elephants are lucky because of their intelligence, strength, wisdom, loyalty, and longevity. They are also considered symbols of power and prosperity.

Rabbits are extremely fertile, and people used to believe their babies were born with their eyes open. Because of this, people thought rabbits could ward off the evil eye.

Spiders have always been considered a sign of persistence and prosperity. In the United Kingdom, small spiders are sometimes referred to as money-spider.

It's bad luck to kill a spider. There's an old saying that goes:
*"If you want to live and thrive,
Let the spider run alive."*
